Businesses Create Customized Workplace Training Platforms Using Coggnó's Free Software.

JUNE 22, 2016 – SAN JOSE, Calif — Today, Coggnó — the world's most extensive online training provider — has their new service, the Coggnó Training University, allowing business to create a free training portal for their employees. The new service allows employers to curate their own training programs using Coggnó's industry-leading catalog of thousands of courses.

“Essentially, we're offering an “iTunes” store of workplace training. We're making it easy for employers and to find, obtain, and assign important training courses to their staff.” — Tod Browndorf, CEO

After a soft launch earlier in the year, the company is officially making the Training University available to new and existing Coggnó customers. Browndorf expects the University become businesses' preferred way of accessing virtual training in the workplace.

“Training isn't always top of mind for most businesses until it's too late. The University will help both employers and employees meet important certification deadlines and stay on top of the latest industry requirements.” — Tod Browndorf, CEO

The Training University launched last week, with zero sign-up fees. Once signed up, businesses will be able to brand their training portal and choose training programs from Coggnó's extensive catalog.
